PROCEEDINGS (The following proceedings were held in open court before the Honorable Allison D. Burroughs, United States District Judge, United States District Court, District of Massachusetts, at the John J. Moakley United States Courthouse, One Courthouse Way, Boston, Massachusetts, on June 9, 2020.) THE CLERK: This is civil action 17-12239, Astellas versus ImStem Biotechnology. Can counsel identify themselves for the record. MR. FRAZIER: David Frazier from Latham & Watkins for the plaintiff Astellas. MS. RABENSTEIN: Rebecca Rabenstein from Latham & Watkins for the plaintiffs Astellas. MR. SHANNON: Good morning. Timothy Shannon from Verrill Dana for the defendants. MS. GAYTHWAITE: Good morning. Martha Gaythwaite from Verrill Dana also for the defendants. MR. STERN: Good morning. Benjamin Stern from Verrill Dana also for the defendants. THE COURT: All right. So we continued this I guess about 60 days ago. At the moment the Court is scheduled to resume jury trials the first week in September. We haven't quite decided the priority of cases, but I'm guessing it's going to be criminal cases and then civil and then the oldest criminal cases. We'll do people in custody and then by age after that, by not in custody and then age after that. I'm guessing there's no way we get a trial date for this before October at the very very earliest.

I know you guys have some international travel involved in this. So what I would like to do is get a date by which this case will be trial ready. And when our name comes up in the queue, we'll be ready to go. What are your thoughts on that?

MR. FRAZIER: Your Honor, this is David Frazier from Latham & Watkins for Astellas. I've had a chance to discuss this with my counterpart for ImStem, Mr. Shannon. We had anticipated the difficulties the Court may have with the logistics of restarting jury trials and the need to deal with criminal cases first. And so at this point Astellas would be willing to waive the right to a jury trial and try all the issues to the bench if that would be a way to get us to trial faster.

THE COURT: Mr. Shannon, what is your view on that?

MR. SHANNON: Good morning, Your Honor. We think a bench trial is appropriate. It avoids the jury problem. It gets us on the docket sooner. It reserves party and judicial resources. We think it makes sense. We would add in the extra dimension, and I think it's a helpful one, that it can be done in part by video. And that would be a particularly helpful accommodation for our witnesses and our party in China. I'm happy to explore their travel limitations with you about that.

THE COURT: If we're going to do a bench trial, we can do the whole thing by Zoom. Okay?

MR. SHANNON: Yes.

THE COURT: Then I don't need to concern myself with anybody's travel issues. If we did a bench trial, normally I try even a bench trial from 10 to 4, and I just don't think that is going to make sense in the current climate, especially dealing with time changes. So what would you guys -- What would your view be for a daily schedule, or would you want to move it around depending on who the witnesses were?

MR. SHANNON: Your Honor, this is Tim Shannon for the defendants. We're entirely flexible. Our only request is that for the witnesses in China we have a day or two where we start on the earlier side because they are 12 hours offset.

THE COURT: I'm just thinking about a schedule that's going to be manageable for all of us. We could do something like two hours in the morning and two hours in the afternoon or an hour and a half in the morning and hour and a half in the afternoon, or we can just play it by ear depending on who the witnesses are. Maybe that's just the easiest way to do it. Say we assume -- let's take it right in the middle. Let's assume three and a half hours of testimony a day. How long are you envisioning the trial would take?

MR. FRAZIER: Your Honor, this is David Frazier for Astellas. I think the trial had originally been set at ten days with the idea of approximate half days. I wonder if we should perhaps leave a window then with the ability to reduce it. I don't know if that's possible for the Court's schedule. I am cognizant that logistics are a little bit more cumbersome if we're going to go entirely by Zoom. And so I would think that less than ten days would be necessary, but I have a hard time figuring out exactly how many fewer than ten days we would need.

THE COURT: Why don't we just set aside two weeks. When do you guys think you would be ready to go?

MR. SHANNON: Your Honor, this is Tim Shannon for the defendants. We've canvassed our witnesses and experts. Everyone is available the week of August 3. Most everyone is available the week of August 10. We might have to juggle one witness and take him out of order if the Court would accommodate. Or alternatively we canvassed the three weeks of September 7, 14, and 21.

I will confess we just sorted that out in the last couple of days. So I don't know if plaintiffs have had a chance to check those dates, but those at least on our end 1

     are available.
 2
               MR. FRAZIER:
                             This is David Frazier again.
     don't have the exact availability, but I think any of those timeframes we can certainly aim for and get back to the Court 5
     very quickly to just confirm that the witnesses are available
 7
     in that window. The second half of August into September I think would be great for us as well.
 9
               THE COURT: I am just not sure what I am going to be doing with my kids this summer. It's possible that three 10
     or four hours a day is going to be ambitious just depending 11
     on where I end up with them. I think the safer thing is 12
13
     September, if that's all right with everyone.
14
               MR. FRAZIER: Yes, Your Honor.
15
               MR. SHANNON: Yes, Your Honor.
               THE COURT: Karen, how do the weeks of the 14th and 16
     the 21st look? Two weeks, September 14 and September 21.
17
18
               THE CLERK: We have a trial scheduled.
19
               THE COURT: Which one?
               THE CLERK: Beltran. It's not as old. It's a 20
     civil.
21
               THE COURT: That's scheduled for one week on the 22
     14th?
23
               THE CLERK:
                          Yes.
                                  The 21st we have a criminal that 24
     we had already moved.
